From Climate Chaos to Global Justice

Americans are still gambling with the fossil fueled economy and its war, waste, and social and ecological disruption. Global industrialization of food, transportation, housing and energy systems requires us to live off the health and well-being of the poor, of people of color ... even future generations.

Let's focus instead on creating green collar jobs! Zero waste manufacturing, green building, green chemistry – jobs that are good for people, good for communities and that ensure a livable planet for future generations.

Tim Montague, Assoc. Director of Environmental Research and contributing editor to Rachel's Democracy & Health News

Naomi Davis, President of Daughter's Trust/ The Village Builders, which has introduced a new paradigm of green economic development for African American communities.
