

7 pm, Wednesday
January 6, 2010
Legacy Books & Cafe
5249 Delmar (near Union)
St. Louis, MO 63108

For more info call 314-727-8554
or visit www.gateway-greens.org

Farm to cafeteria programs link local farmers with schools. This simple idea solves two major problems: unhealthy food for children, and the disappearance of small farms. By purchasing locally grown products, schools can serve fresh, healthy food to the students, create new markets for local farmers and provide innovative educational activities that meet state education standards. Join us for a panel discussion:

- Barb Chicherio, Gateway Green Alliance
- Dr. Mildred Mattfeldt-Beman, Chair, Dept. of Nutrition & Dietetics, SLU
- Jean Corbett, Gateway Greening Education Coordinator
- Althea Albert-Santiago, Dir. Food Services, St. Louis Public Schools
- Rev. Audrey Hollis, Greater St. Mark Community Garden [moderator]

Farm to Cafeteria

Getting kids
into the garden &
locally grown food into the schools

